prisoner who had been found drunk and creating a disturbance on Forty-fourth street, near Fourth avenue. The prisoner gave his name as Joe Bennett.

Something about the man's appearance set Capt. Kenay to thinking, and the more he turned the matter over in his mind the more firmly convinced he was that his prisoner was George Ketcham, an escaped convict.

He telephoned to Clerk James Tully, of the Penitentiary, and inquired about Ketcham. Tully replied that Ketcham was not wanted by the authorities.

On Monday Warden Patrick Hayes, of the penitentiary, came downtown, and while in the vicinity of Police Headmarters, he met Police Inspector Mac-Kellar. The latter, in the course of conversation, meniloned Bennett's arrest, and Capt. Kenny's suspicions that he was an escaped prisoner.

"We want that man." said Hayes, "But your clerk said he wasn't wanted." Mackellar replied.

"Well, there's a mistake somewhere." Warden Hayes went down to Raymond Street Jail and saw Bennett. He went back to the penitentiary and to-day he called at the jail again. He was accompanied by George Sohns, the drug clerk, who remembered Ketcham well. Sohns identified Bennett as the man the authorities had been searching for, and the prisoner was turned over to Warden Hayes to be taken back to the penitentiary.

The records show that on Feb. 19. 1886. George Ketcham was the penitentiary. On Nov. 29, 1887, he escaped.

Ketcham learned that the Rogers avenue gate of the penitentiary was left in chargt of a short-term prisoner. In an unknown manner he secured some antiline dve and dyed his prison garb a dark color. He then walked past the convict gateman and disappeared.

A general siarm was sent out for him as soon as his escape was discovered, but he was never traced. Now that he is back in the Penitentiary, it is learned that he was arrested once since his escape, when he was locked up in the Hamilton avenue station for drunkenness.

The cable message gave the gossips fresh food for discussion, as they say that the manager has not renewed the lease of his theatre, which lease expires next year.

money has been expended, or what has been done with it.

It is also charged that the School Board, of School District No. 3, bought school supplies and pocketed the discounts.

A large number of people were present at the investigation from Canarsie. They expected to hear the testimony of Thomas J. Donnelly, one of the well-known citizens of Flatbush, but Mr. Donnelly is ill at Babylon.

The Commissioners decided to send to that place for his sworn statement.

Mrs. Louise Lohman, wife of the Treasurer of District School No. 3, at Canarsie, was the first witness.

She said John S. Schenck came to her house one morning after a town meeting held in January last, and asked to look over the Treasurer's books. They were given to him and he tore out two pages.

Mrs. Solomon said she usually kept the town books for her husband. She said she wanted Schenck to tear out the pages, because he had made mistakes in them. She said she also kept all the vouchers in her possession.

The pages that were torn out contained the record of the purchase of certain school books, bought about Nov. 16, 1881.

Christian Kraft said he had performed certain work on cisterns for the School Board in the Spring of 1892. He said he had received all but 140 of the $300 due him for that work.

The evidence showed that Kraft had received $130 of the bill a few weeks ago. No record was found in the books of this disbursement.

John Kraft, a nephew of the last witness, said while he was a member of the Board he did some work for the town and was paid for it.

William Lot said he had carted some books for Worrell. When shown the voucher for the payment of his bill he did not recognize it.

Lawyer Julien T. Davies, the counsel for the Committee on Extensions, has been working for the past week upon the resolutions and other documents, which he obtained from the Secretary of the Rapid Transit Commission, and he was at the meeting to-day to make his report.

his report.

It was generally believed that the Railroad Company would make another effort to obtain better terms from the city than have yet been granted on the ground that it will be a very difficult matter in the present state of the financial market to raise the money that will be required to begin the work of construction.

The sum necessary to complete all the extensions and improvements proposed would, the Company says, be about $29,000,000, and there are many of the directors who are not satisfied with either of the propositions which have been made by the Rapid Transit Commissioners.

Among the objectors is Russell Sage, who still holds to the views which he has already expressed many times, that the Company is doing a favor to the people of the city by consenting to extend its lines and improve its service, and that nothing should be exacted in the way of pecuniary compensation to the city for the franchises which it is willing to grant.

Since the resolutions of June 20, however, it is asserted that other directors of the road have been doing a good deal of hard thinking on the subject, and that the majority of them are now in favor of accepting one or the other alternatives laid down by the Commission. In fact, the Committee on Extensions has had an informal conference almost every day during the past two weeks and is prepared, it is said, to report in favor of immediately closing the bargain.

favor of immediately closing the bar-gain.

The probability is, if this information is authentic, that the Manhattan people will accept the lump sum proposition, by which the Company binds itself to pay $175.00 a year for all time to come rather than the payment of 5 per cent, on its annual income, which in no year is to be less than $125,000.
